THE ASSASSINATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

We humbly beg the pardon of the Southern rebels, for ascribing to their immediate agency that awful paroxysm of Friday night, of which the event proved only a Northern Copperhead was capable.

We wringed these gentle souls of the Southern chivalry. Among all the low men hyenas, who in their high revelry of head-hunting made rings to the bones and drinking cups from the skulls of dead Union soldiers; among all the savages who cooed and gloated over the hanging agony of the slow consuming cruelty, which murdered tens of thousands of Union prisoners at Andersonville and Salisbury, and glutted their filthy and diabolical massacre of Fort Pillow treason could find no villain equal to this consummate audacity of crime which defied its willing, its zealous and its fitting instrument in a Northern Copperhead.

The Southern conspirators against law and liberty and civilization had finished their part of the gigantic plot in the week of half a continent.

They served for their Northern accomplices to crown the fearful edifice of guilt with a horror so stupendous as to liquidate in one installment their long arrears of pledges unfulfilled, and balance at a single word resounding blood the share of Northern and Southern traitors in the common infamy of the Rebellion. Now at least the Northern co-workers in the cause of Southern treason may claim to have done their part in the awful role, and impartial history at least will accord them an equal share of its shame. The responsibility for the assassination of President Lincoln can not be limited to the wretch who was the immediate actor in the dreadful deed—nor to the little band of assassins associated with him. There are indications, indeed, that these men were merely the bludgeoning instruments of a rebel fanaticism, as at Richmond, but be this as it may, assuming that the murderous plot was confined, from its inception to its execution, to the assassins themselves, and that they were moved thereto only by a blind and reckless fanaticism of partisan fury—not the less is their crime the direct fruit of that infernal treason which the South developed in the form of Rebellion and in the North in Copperheadism.

It needs no written compact to trace its instigation to the same Arch Devil that inspired the atrocities of Andersonville and the draft riots of New York, and whose throne was at Richmond and his ante-chamber at the New York hotel. His animus—his inspiration—his determining and essential motive, proceeded from the prevailing sentiment of Northern Copperheadism and Southern rebels; its immense audacity—its reckless madness—the will to do the deed, and dare its personal consequences, were supplied by the personal character of the villain who accomplished it.

The Copperhead leaders of the North have so zealously indicated among their followers the belief that President Lincoln was a cruel tyrant under whose domination the world was groaning—that the terrific fury of the credulous and vain tragedian caught fire with an ambition to play the chief part of a tyrannicide, and place himself in a lofty niche of tragic renown with Brutus and Haman and Pelopidas and Charlotte Corday, by ridding the world of a monster; and that he counted accurately on the sympathy of his awful part in the plot to which he played his awful part, that evidence enough in the half-suppressed applause which greets the exploit from many a Copperhead lip—too ignorant to know that they are rejoicing over the most fearful calamity which ever befell this nation.

SECRETARY SEWARD STILL LIVING.

The public will be much rejoiced to know that the report of Secretary Seward's death in our Sunday's issue, was premature. The origin of the report will be explained in the following paragraph from the Chicago Journal of Saturday evening, for a copy of which we are indebted to the kindness of a passenger who got through ahead of the telegraph:

SECRETARY SEWARD.

The following dispatch was received by us at 12 o'clock this morning:—
Washington, April 15.—Secretary Seward died at 10 o'clock this morning.

E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Subsequently the telegraph office at Philadelphia sent word that the report was a mistake—that it had not been sent by the Secretary of War, and that Secretary Seward was not dead.

It will be observed by the whole tenor of the accounts we publish elsewhere, that no necessarily fatal result was apprehended from Mr. Seward's wounds except so far as they might tend to aggravate the consequences of his previous injuries. And our despatches of the 16th and 17th afford the most encouraging hopes of his recovery—and that he will yet be spared to the Nation in whose cause he labored with such conspicuous ability, and to the eminent station he has done so much to dignify and adorn.

A Trophy Secured.

The Seventeenth Infantry, captured from the rebels at Cherash, North Carolina, a rifled ten pounder, "Blackie gun," 24 inch caliber, manufactured in Liverpool in 1862. General French P. Blair, the Corps Commander, presented the gun to the First Minnesota Battery (Capt. Clayton's) for their gallant conduct during the late engagements.

The First Battery unanimously voted to present the gun to their State; and a number of the boys coming home about that time, on furlough, they brought the trophy along with them as far as Baltimore, where they were compelled to leave it for want of funds to pay freight. Gov. Miller, being apprised of this state of things, at once wrote to a transportation agent at Baltimore to send the gun out immediately. On its arriving here he designs having it kept as a trophy, to be fired perhaps, on our national anniversaries.

have proven their innocence, but others are still in doubt. Evidence sufficient has accumulated to implicate some six different persons in the diabolical plot, all of whom have been placed in the hands of the law.

Two pairs of handcuffs, and a gag were found in Booth's trunk. He hired a horse from the livery stable the afternoon before the deed, and took it to the place where he hired the horse to watch it, while he perpetrated the deed.

New York, April 17.

The N. Y. Times Washington special says, Secretary Seward will recover.

Frederick Seward is still unconscious. The blood slowly oozed from the back of his head, but he has a easy pulse. His head is dreadfully contused.

THE CITY.

The Weekly Press.—The current issue of the Weekly Press is unusually interesting. It contains full details of the assassination of the President, and the attack on Secretary Seward, President Lincoln's last speech, Andrew Johnson's speech defining his policy, the last of Jeff Davis, any correspondence from Mobile and Chattanooga, editorial articles upon the assassination of the President and other matters, a list of deaths of Minnesota soldiers at Andersonville prison with the number of each grave, and a great variety of other matter. Price five cents in wrappers.

FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Destructive and Calamitous Conflagration.

Sixteen Business Houses Burned.

Total Loss from $125,000 to $150,000—Insurance $75,000.

A Large Portion of the Business Part of the City in Ruins.

Our sister city, Minneapolis, was yesterday visited by a most destructive conflagration, which destroyed sixteen business houses, together with a large share of their contents, thus laying in ruins one of the busiest portions of the main street of the city, and destroying property to value of $125,000. The buildings burned were on the north side of Bridge street and occupied an entire block, with the exception of the fine store building, occupied, we believe, by the First National Bank.

How this calamitous fire originated is not clearly determined. Some attribute it to incendiaries, others to accident. When first discovered it was, as seemed to be, in the rear of Burt and Hoag's clothing store, and inside. This was about half-past twelve or one o'clock in the morning. The alarm was at once given, but as the night was dark and tempestuous, the rain falling in torrents, it was difficult for the firemen to get near the burning place. The fire spread up and down the square, and its progress could not be checked. All efforts were then bent on saving movable property, and in some instances with good success.

We give below a list of the buildings destroyed, with owners' names, in order, so far as our reporter was able to ascertain them in the short interval allowed him between the passage of the up and down trains at St. Anthony. Commencing at the bank building, which was saved by the special exertions of the fire men, the list runs:

1. C. H. & W. Pettit, hardware merchants. They owned and occupied the corner of the river, of a fine double brick building, three stories in height. The building was worth $50,000, which was insured for $30,000 in the Phoenix, Arctic, and Home—$1,900 in each. A very large stock of hardware was in the store, very much of which was damaged into total loss. On this there were policies of $1,000 each in the Arctic and Phoenix, and of $1,500 each in the Metropolitan, Hartford and Home of Hartford—$6,000 in all. The loss on stock was $30,000 or $40,000, and on building about $1,500.

2. The other half of the building was owned by J. R. Mendall, Esq., and was valued at $5,000. The ground floor was occupied by A. T. Hale & Co., jewelers, who saved nearly all their stock, with a loss of $500. It was insured for $9,000. Mr. Mendall has a policy of $1,500 in the Metropolitan.

3. The next building was a two-story frame, owned and occupied by Nettie & Wiggins as a butcher shop, and the upper story by Mr. Nettie as a dwelling. The building was valued at $2,000, and was not insured.

4. Gray Brothers had their drug store in the next building, a two-story frame worth about $900. It was owned by Dr. Greeley and uninsured. Gray Brothers got part of their stock out, badly damaged. They are insured for $2,000, which will almost cover the loss, we learn.

Up stairs in this building, a couple of young ladies from Forest City had recently started a millinery shop. They lost everything. Names unknown to our informant.

5. A. M. Greeley's Saddlery Store was in the next building, a two-story frame, owned by himself. His family lived up stairs. He had no insurance on his building. Loss $3,500. His stock was mostly saved, and was insured for $1,000.

6. Messrs. Burt and Hoag occupied the ground floor of the next building, a two-story frame, owned by themselves for a clothing store. The building was worth about $1500, and was insured for $700 in the "Home." They had a very large stock of clothing, valued at $10,000, which was totally consumed, and a fine originated in this building. There was an insurance on this stock for $5,000. They had received $1,700 worth only the evening before the fire, and it was yet unpacked.

Up stairs, Messrs. Elliot and Powers, Photographers, lost their entire fixtures, value $1000. Insured in Phoenix for $400. The next building, also a two-story frame, was occupied by Hoag & Billings as a Feed Store. Their stock (value not ascertained by us) was all destroyed; insurance, $1,500. The building was owned by Henry T. Waller, and was insured, value $700. The upper story was occupied as a barber shop by J. Loss, &c., not known.

8. O. M. Lerway, Grocer, owned and occupied the next building, a two-story frame valued at $1,500—and uninsured. His stock was partially saved, but about $1,000 worth was consumed.

NORTHFIELD ITEMS.

A Drunken Fray and Homicide.

Public Expressions on the National Calamity.

Northfield, April 18, 1865.

On Thursday last, a party of five or six Norwegian, residents of the adjoining town of Warsaw, Goodhue county, in return for having been invited to a social gathering, had imbibed freely enough of liquor to render them quarrelsome, got into an affray, which resulted in the stabbing of one named John Johnson, another of the number named Hendrick Johnson. The wound, though in the region of the heart, was not believed to be mortal. Hendrick Johnson was taken to the village, where they had imbibed freely enough of liquor to render them quarrelsome, got into an affray, which resulted in the stabbing of one named John Johnson, another of the number named Hendrick Johnson.
